While other girls her age are having fun in the playground, Lakshmi is hard at work. She gets up early to work on a tea plantation. Families often take their children out of school in India because they need money. Lakshmi dreams of going back to school and her mother is happy about that, but everyone must work to provide money for the family. Fortunately, organisations like UNICEF now provide girls' clubs on the plantation to help Lakshmi and her friends go back to school.

Nine-year old Razia needs to fight just to receive an education. Many people in Pakistan believe that girls mustn't go to school for cultural reasons. However, Razia is one of the lucky ones. Her parents believe in education and they are proud of their daughter. The struggle doesn't end there. Schools in Pakistan also have few facilities such as computers and other equipment so teachers must work hard just to provide a basic education for their students.

- a. What are some difficulties Lakshmi and Razia have in going to school?
- b. What is similar and what is different in the girls' stories?
